Agriculture Undergrad Society Formed

Mr. Nelson Hawn of Kemptville Agricultural School was guest speaker at a supper meeting of the Agricultural Undergraduate Faculty on last Thursday (the 12th). The meeting was called for and resulted in the formation of the Agricultural Undergraduate Society at Macdonald College.

The undergraduate society was formed to help the student in agricultural science to secure better jobs, and to help improve the position of the agricultural students in the present Canadian setup.

Dr. Hawn addressed the group of some one-hundred and thirty agriculture undergrads on the theme of "The City Man's Impressions of the Farmer". He stated that today the farmer is becoming more of an important individual than ever before, as fewer farmers are feeding increasing numbers of people, and his income, and therefore buying power, is increasing correspondingly.

He stated that many impressions held by the modern city man are those which were formed decades ago, when you could "smell the farmer coming". Now, the farmer is becoming more educated, and is turning into a conventiongoer; but as such, he must stand up and say what he thinks, because if he does not, then people will think him ignorant.

Mr. Hawn felt that as a group, farmers were friendlier, and much more willing to help each other out. They stuck together, and had a keener sense of responsibility.

In his closing remarks, Mr. Hawn said that good public relations were important, and so it should be a job of the new A.U.S. to improve public relations.

A good image kept clean wears no tarnish.

Laird Hall Extension Opened

Last Saturday the new extension to Laird Hall was opened for occupancy. It didn't take long before the 100 girls and all their luggage started streaming or should I say staggering in. By Sunday night, everyone had moved in and were walking around the new wing checking to see if everything was in working order.

board. Irons provided here are steam and have a special outlet so they shut off automatically by means of a timing device. As yet there aren't any phones in the new wing but "Mr. Bell" has the order so they should be here soon.

The plan of the rooms is very similar to that of the old section except in the single rooms there is more space. The beds are free standing which means less acrobatics when making the bed. Also it eliminates the possibility of the bed falling on your toes. The comfort of the student was really considered when the soft leather easy chairs were purchased. I think there might be a tendency to fall asleep in these chairs - anyone want to trade for my hard wooden straight back chair? If you are the penthouse type - the fifth floor is for you. The rooms up there are spacious and have entirely new designs. The new section of Laird Hall has been designed for the students comfort and convenience. I hope everyone will enjoy their year in the new building and treat it well.

The new extension to Laird has many new features to make residence life more liveable. One of the most popular assets is the elevator. It was so popular last Sunday night that Mrs. Wood found some girls riding up and down for pleasure. Just down the hall from the elevator is a kitchenette. This room is provided with a stove top set into the counter, a sink and a refrigerator. This area can be closed off from the rest of the room by a large folding door. The rest of the room is furnished with chesterfields, end tables and comfortable chairs for good relaxation purposes. From here we can go next door into the ironing and hair drying room. There are brand new hairdryers in the new extension which work automatically. The ironing boards also show improvement as they can be folded up into a wall cup-

Sadie Hawkins At Mac

Sadie Hawkins week started off Monday night when the girls tried to show their authorities as they tried to keep the boys hemmed up in the Stewart Foyer.

As the week proceeded the boys made the girls work for them. Trays were carried from the dining hall and it was not uncommon for some of the weaker sex to carry more than one tray.

During the week the boys in Britain Hall looked much neater as they had clean shirts and their pants all in press. Some of the foot work which was done was the first time for some of the boys since they hit Mac.

The Brittain Hall Foyer was not an uncommon place for female visitors as they proceeded across from Stewart and Laird to pick up their dates.

The ball really began to roll on Wednesday night when the Girlie Show took place in the foyer of Stewart Hall.

The week had its point of suspense as the girls waited for Friday and Kirk's Court. They waited also to find out who the Terrible Ten were. On Friday evening both mysteries came into the open. The Terrible Ten put on their display in the Stewart foyer before a large crowd. Proceedings then went to Kirk's Court where girls were brought up before Judge Pierre. All who appeared were sentenced according to the "crime" accused of.

Sadie Hawkins week was brought to a close on Saturday night as the Dogpatcher's gathered in the Coffee Shop to close off the weeks' festivities. The evening was topped off by a good old fashioned Dogpatch Weddin'. Marri' Sam (Len Best) united in marriage Lil Abner and Daisy Mae. Lil Abner for this year was in the person of Clarence McCloskey and the queen of the week, Daisy Mae was Barb Allen. Both were chosen in a contest which was held during the evening.

Simon Fraser To Offer Athletic Scholarships

British Columbia's Simon Fraser University, opening in 1965, will be the first Canadian university to grant athletic scholarships.

Though athletic scholarships have been given at American schools for many years, they have been forbidden at all Canadian universities.

Simon Fraser President P. McTaggart-Cowan argues, however, that there is no reason why higher education and higher athletic performance cannot go together, noting Bruce Kidd, Bill Crothers and Russ Jackson as examples.

The Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union, (CIAT), governing body for all college athletics in Canada, forbids the use of subsidies to athletes from universities or bodies under the jurisdiction of the university.

Most universities side-step this regulation, however, by allowing private alumni to offer, "as private citizens", financial assistance to athletic students.

Thus, under CIAT regula-

by Tom Coleman
reprinted from The Silhouette

tions, any school competing with Simon Fraser will be barred from official championships.

To halt the drain of Canadian athletes to American campuses, Simon Fraser has advocated a three-point program: athletic scholarships provided by outside or private sources; superior coaching staffs, including the importation of U.S. talent where necessary; sincere interest in athletics by the university by providing tutorial encouragement, though not at the expense of the academic program.

Fraud or Freud?

Editorial

During the last few years there have been a number of criticisms of the athletic set up at Macdonald College. The foremost of these was the fact that our teams lacked good athletes, especially in comparison with some of the teams in the Ottawa St. Lawrence leagues. There have been a number of questions asked along the lines of why Macdonald did not offer athletic scholarships.

The article on page one of this paper points out the fact that such scholarships are not allowed in Canadian colleges. This is something that the majority of students here at Macdonald did not know, probably because they did not believe that such a completely unreasonable policy could exist. Now we know. Are we going to let Simon Fraser University go it alone? THIS IS A TIME TO STAND UP AND BE COUNTED!

It stands to reason that there are a number of good athletic students who could pass a college course, but do not try because they cannot afford it. It also stands to reason that they will take a job playing amateur or semi-professional for money, rather than try to struggle through college without funds. Would these students not be an asset to any college. True, they all wouldn't make first class marks, or even second class marks, but no college is a real college if it consists of only egg-heads and bookworms. A college has to be willing to be well rounded for the students to get a real college education - (and this does not come from books alone).

The student playing sports, on scholarship or not, devotes a lot of his time and energy to playing that sport, and the enjoyment he gets out of this far offsets any small reduction he may get in marks.

The kind of student who would attend college on scholarship would be grateful for the chance, and would probably put an extra effort into his studies. He is not going to fail if it means losing his scholarship.

The advent of athletic scholarships to universities would result in the greatest increase of amateur sportsmen ever witnessed in Canada. (who knows how many kids we would get?) This country has been crying for years that we lose too many international events (world olympics, hockey etc.) due to a lack of amateurs; they go professional, and why not? where can they stay amateur? What better place than in college?

Now is the time to make the government change its policy. It would not only make a higher standard of sports in the colleges, but would also be good for the country. This is a chance to let the government know we think they're wrong.

WILL WE TAKE IT?

Letters To The Editor

Disgusted With Behaviour

Dear Sir:

Presumably we are students of a college that has the distinction of part of one of Canada's foremost institutions of higher education. As such we must be credited with a reasonably high degree of intelligence. On Friday last, the student body was presented with a display which must seriously and adversely affect our integrity as students.

Good fun is good fun; and no one can deny us the right to indulge in it. However, it would seem that the organizers of last Friday night's Kirk's Court cannot recognize just what constitutes good fun. They seem to feel that smut is an adequate substitute for wit. Friday night's performance proved them very wrong. The display was an insult not only to the "defendants" of the trials (one in particular, and the perpetrators of this farce must realize whom), but also to the audience who had to sit and suffer the indiscretions of the "honourable" court jurors.

We the class of 2S, feel that an apology is in order from all such gentlemen as there may be among the organizers. We feel that the mark of good clean fun was grossly exceeded.

The Class of 2S

Dear Sir,

We feel that it has become our obligation to express our utter disgust concerning the presentation of Kirk's Court last Friday night in the Assembly Hall.

This letter of course refers to the several very slanderous and extremely vulgar remarks made concerning a very respectable young lady who had been procured as the final "defendant".

It was indeed appalling to have witnessed the utter degradation this female suffered publicly at the merciless hands of the "seniors", who acted like a pack of wolves. We cannot imagine why this young lady should have deserved such a fate.

In general, the type of production seen in Kirk's Court is far below the standard expected of mature college students. It appears as if humour on this campus can be derived only through the misuse of sex and drinking. We suggest that in future a more mature approach should be taken in the production of Kirk's Court.

Prejudiced Purser

Dear Sir,

The amount of money which is allotted to sports in this college is sizeable. This fact is not shown when one looks at the pathetic excuse that we have as weight-lifting equipment. This I think shows a prejudice against weight-lifting on the part of the person who holds the sport purse strings.

Wood B. Strong.

In conclusion we think a full scale apology on the part of the members of the senior class is obligatory in order to restore the dignity of this young lady.

Patrick Hill,
Tony Schori,
Tony Grandoni.

Dear Sir:

A week ago many of us witnessed an extremity of mal-judgement and undue insultation - to put it mildly. Yes, I am speaking of the last part of Kirk's Court. The purpose of such a show is to entertain. I am sure that the number of people entertained at the young ladies expense dwindled

Editors Note

The class of '65 has apologized to anyone who may have been offended by last Friday night's show.

as insult was added to compound injury. The blame does not rest only on the "prosecutor" and the "defender". Lack of planning and consequence questioning on the part of the class is the reason (an excuse does not exist). It is shameful that such an extremity has been reached in our midst. Let us learn from this and prevent future embarrassment.

Truly yours,
A Senior.

Dear Sir:

Sadie Hawkins week - a week in which the fellows on our campus can impose upon the girls for such things as carrying trays, opening doors, etc., etc.

However, this past week my upper class under the disguise of Sadie Hawkins week behaved most indignant and indecent. To begin with the "Terrible Ten" put on a show in the Stewart Foyer which was utterly disgraceful. When is stripping in the lounge of a girl's residence suitable behaviour for men in their third year of college? As though not to be outdone the Seniors put on a show (alias Kirk's Court) which was not even fit for one of the lowest night clubs. Our Seniors, those who we are to respect, in front of a near capacity audience were using the most vulgar and crude language possible.

Surely Student Council or the Men's Residence Committee do not have to put restrictions on our campus activities. I believe that it is the responsibility of the class concerned to see that it does not happen again. I feel that those Seniors and Juniors involved in last Friday night's activities should make a public apology to their fellow students of Macdonald College.

Sincerely yours,
John Boomgaardt

Slow Freight To Yukon

Dear Sir:

We would like to comment on a very humorous letter, written by Mr. John H. Horton, which appeared in the October 23rd Failt-Ye Times. We would like to point out that judging is subjective in any event where no concrete standard exist. Different judges concentrate upon different features. Perhaps the method is somewhat unfair, but how could you improve upon it? Would a popular vote from the audience be the answer? Hardly, as Macdonald would have finished one-two. A panel? This would place the decision in less qualified hands. The judging should really have been done by an IBM computer, then there would have been no beefs about the final verdict.

We would like to thank Alex McKinney and his staff for their fine work and for the enjoyment the Festival brought to so many people.

In conclusion, we'll take that slow freight back to the Yukon, if Mr. John H. Horton will lay the tracks.

Yours sincerely,
Jon and Rob,
The Laurentide Two

Thanks

Dear Sir,

We owe a huge thanks to Miss Neilson as she has worked unceasingly to have the new wing in Laird Hall open before Christmas. Mrs. Wood and Miss Potton have spent many long hours trying to get last minute details ironed out before the arrival of the new students. It is now up to us to show them our appreciation by taking care of this section.

Pleased

Dear Sir,

We would like to thank the Senior girls and members of the fourth year Horticulture option who gave us the Surprise Birthday party on November 8. Special thanks to the girls who made the cake.

Your thoughtfulness was very much appreciated and will always be remembered.

Notes Of Geography Club

On November 5th the Geography Club was born. Intended as a student activity, Professor Wise was instrumental in providing a successful beginning. Under his excellent supervision the students, with S.T.S. aid, can make the club interesting, informing and educational.

Approximately 120 people spared time from a busy schedule to wend their way to Room

227. Not one of the people present left unawed. "A Tale of Two Cities: Moscow and Leningrad" was truly exceptional. The slides were unretouched and searching. Alone they instilled a new respect and defied description.

On behalf of all present, may I extend my congratulations for a fine program, courtesy of Professor Wise.

Class Play Festival Winners Chosen

The Class Play Festival closed last Wednesday evening with the final presentation of plays and the announcement of the judges' decisions at a very successful and informal Coffee Party in the Stewart

Room. The winners were announced as follows: best director Roald Kittilsen with honorable mention to Janet Hatfield, best supporting actor to Gene Pommier who was termed the best actor in the Festival but was in a supporting role also honorable mention to Wayne Gagné and Dan Parkinson. The best supporting actress was Vivien Zbik. The best actor and actress were Steve Lewis and Marg Hoey. There were five permanent individual trophies presented to these winners which will be engraved and returned to them. The Inter-class Shield for the Best Production went to Ag and Home Ec '67 for THE BISHOP'S CANDLESTICKS. Class points were awarded and brought up to date, the standings are to be found in the trophy case in the Main Building.

An interesting discussion of the plays and criticisms by the judges followed. Our judges, Mrs. Wood, Mr. Elliott, Dr. Callan, Mr. MacRae and Dr. McElroy seemed pleased with our new idea of a Festival format instead of the week by week system of other years. All were high in praise of class plays chairman Hugh MacDonald and his helpers.

There are a number of points where we would like to express concern. First of all the Diploma Class agreed to present a play and then dropped out at the last minute, for this breach they were penalized five points. Secondly, of a possible eleven plays only five classes presented performances. Why?

Publicity and notice to class presidents was equal to if not better than last year. We are particularly concerned that there were no Freshmen plays -- Aggies-Home Ecs, Teachers or Phys. Eds. nor were there plays from 2S or 1G

(which according to one source is a very keen bunch this year). To give credit where it is due I must congratulate the TP class for presenting a play for the student body in this year's Festival.

While on the subject of the lack of 'keenness' of the Freshmen we were led to expect something from the Freshmen due to their participation in Fun Night during Orientation Week. They seem to have run out of steam. They did not participate in the Skit Night giving the students a programme of only four skits. In past years Freshmen have gone all out to make a name for themselves. Two years ago the class of '66 won both skit night and class plays - as Freshmen! Last year the Freshmen teachers walked off with the Class Play trophy. Freshmen you have a name to live up to so start hustling.

A Lit. and Deb. meeting was held on Thurs., Nov. 12 in the Council House. Reports of the different clubs were heard, plans for Inter-class competitions for next term were discussed also a new approach to the Christmas Party.

Rugger Team Repeat s Victory

The Macdonald College Rugby team played a return match against the Wanderers last Saturday. With both teams fielding a stronger side; Wanderers were eager to revenge their defeat of the previous week. Again Mac proved to be too strong, thrashing the Wanderers 22-0.

In the opening few minutes of the match Mac scored and remained on top throughout the game. This result was mainly due to the fact that there was more weight and experience in the scrum on the Mac side. The ball was thus being fed back to the three-quarter line with regularity. The backs without stiff opposition were able to run and pass the ball more freely and with increasing confidence. A perfect team try resulted when the ball was whipped out from a set-scrum to the three-quarters. With good strong running and excellent passing the outside centre was able to beat his man to score near the flag post. There were some good tries scored by many individuals and to name one individual would be to name the whole team.

The Macdonald Rugger team is as yet a novice side. It has a great many things to learn. Yet let us not underestimate the potential of this side. It has shown in the last two games that it can learn quickly and effectively. This is not due only to the players who are eager to learn but also to the fact that rugger is an easy game to understand. Many of the players have come to realize that Rugger, though simple, is a versatile game; a game that can be played by every shape and size of man, demanding of everyone quick thought, versatility and endurance (to last the 1 1/2 hours). With these demands many a player can develop an insatiable appetite for the game. This is proven by the very keenness of our team. It wishes to brave the cold this coming Saturday for another game. Cold or no cold, Alex Schumacher is trying to arrange a match against McGill for this Saturday at Mac.

Spencer Dunn Stars As Aggies Show Potential

The Mac Aggies, sporting bright new uniforms, opened the Inter-City Hockey League, schedule last Saturday afternoon at the Glenfinnan Arena against C.M.R. Our boys played a great game but came out on the short end, losing 4-1. Spencer Dunn was the big man on the ice as he kicked away 42 shots directed at the Mac net.

The first period saw a fast-skating, wide-open type of hockey with Ron Trivers, a third year veteran, scoring the only goal on a beautiful pass from newcomer Alex Manson. The big line of Ron Trivers, John Ionson, and Terry Pender harassed the C.M.R. defense continually while Bob Grant, Rich Finlay, and Alex Manson showed great form on the bluelines. Mac outshot C.M.R. 13-12 in the period.

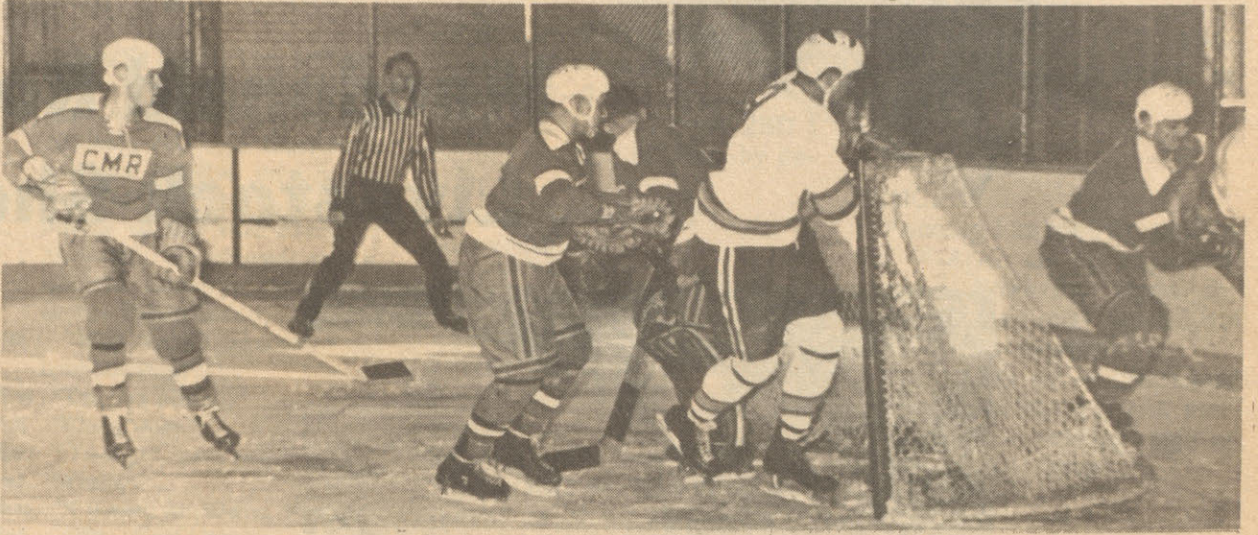

Early in the second, the Aggies had some great scoring opportunities but failed to complete their plays around the net. Mid-way through the period the defensemen were having difficulties clearing the puck and the military boys finally popped one in. From this point on, the superior conditioning and longer pre-season practices of the C.M.R. boys began to show as they controlled most of the play for the rest of the game. Trivers was sitting out a penalty when when Lenehan put C.M.R. ahead to stay at 15:14 of the second period. The Aggies picked up four penalties in the period and were outshot 17-4.

The third period was similar to the second frame with C.M.R. counting two fast goals at 10:42 and 11:45 to round out the scoring. On the last goal, "Big Spence" stopped a three man break-a-way only to have the rebound slapped in by an alert defenseman from St. Jean.

The Aggies picked up six of the nine minor penalties and were outshot 46-22 on the game. With Dunn continuing this standout performances between the pipes, with the forward lines beginning to jell, and with the defensemen getting to know their play patterns, the Aggies should be a threatening contender in both leagues. The Aggies, who have now had another weeks practices under their belts, will be all set to take on U. of Montreal tomorrow afternoon at the Glenfinnan Arena. Let's get out and cheer the boys to victory!

- 15) North Country Eve Lamb

Trophies will be awarded to the Champion of each breed as well as to the Grand Champion Showman of the day. A special lesson in showmanship and preparation of the animals will be given and experienced superintendants will be available to help those wishing assistance.

Class points will be awarded on the basis of participation with extra points being awarded to the winner.

It was noted that last years Freshman Class, Senior Class and Second Year Diploma Class made a very poor showing. Our livestock show will be a success only if each class gives it their full support. Make sure that your names is on the list as soon as it is in the Stewart Hall Foyer.

The Right To Choose

Those Canadians who have given thought to the relations between the Communist and non-Communist states will, perhaps, have two main considerations in mind. The first is that every effort should be made by our and other Western governments to reach a working arrangement with, particularly, the Soviet Union, to the extent that that can be done without sacrificing Canadian interests. The second is that, while the Russians must choose their own form of government and society, it is our business, -- and ours alone, -- to decide on the institutions we prefer. It is important that these two factors should not be confused. It is possible for us to make a distinction between them: it is not possible for the disciples of Karl Marx.

Slow but perhaps real progress can be made in such matters as the reduction of armaments. The limits are obvious, as illustrated by the Soviet efforts to sabotage the peace-keeping efforts of the United Nations, but we are properly looking for any genuine compromises and agreements that can be achieved. No doubt the Russians and their allies are too, up to that point, -- but their political philosophy does not allow them to accept the peaceful coexistence in which they profess to believe.

Marx failed to convert his fellow-Germans to his beliefs, but they were accepted by the Bolsheviks in a country that had never known political freedom, had a weak middle class, and a decaying monarchy. In the half-century since there have inevitably been adjustments in the Marxist doctrine to suit the needs of the Soviet Union, but basically it is as described in Marx's vast book CAPITAL and in the COMMUNIST MANIFESTO.

Marx was no more a social democrat than a democrat is an anarchist. It is inherent in his writings that there can be no freedom of speech or action. As put into effect by the Russians this meant government by an oligarchy (which was self-appointed), with any opposition suppressed by force and the secret police. (These methods were traditional in Russia). The middle class and private property were to be abolished. Christianity was a danger both because it taught peace and because Communism demands an unchallenged control of individuals. All must be rendered to Caesar and nothing to God. Communism, however, was intended not only to be adopted by an individual country at its wish, but to be imposed, as circumstances permitted, on the rest of the world. This has always been fundamental to Communism as an objective, by whatever means to be achieved.

Expansion fitted well into the Russian scheme of things, for Russia had been pushing violently across its frontiers for more than two centuries. Taking advantage of the alliance with Germany (for the division of the spoils), the Russians had invaded Finland, the Baltic States, and Poland. When they had reached, -- for the time at least, -- the practical limits of this method, they turned to the weapon which had been so successful in the Russian revolution, -- propaganda. This has been persistently and skilfully directed against all non-Communist states, fashioned to be most effective in the local conditions. The purpose is not to instruct us in their own beliefs, -- that would be legitimate, -- but quite the opposite: to persuade us that Marxism is something different from what in fact it is. Thus coexistence must be one-sided.

No doubt some Canadians honestly believe that we would do better to abolish private property, our elective institutions, freedom of speech and the press, and the rule of law. Such people can be happy in a Communist state. But for those who prefer the society which we have known and fought for, Marxism is not the answer. It is in our creed to respect the rights of others to choose their own institutions; but it is in our tradition to choose our own institutions and way of life. Our economic and political system is no doubt imperfect, but we would hope to improve it on Canadian lines and not by the dictates of foreigners.

Perhaps because Canadians instinctively dislike propaganda they are the easier victims of it. But it is a strange sight indeed when Russia, -- whether Czarist or Communist, the greatest imperialist power since the days of Rome, -- is represented as the home of peace and democracy. Because many Canadians seem unable to distinguish between international negotiation and conquest by words we are in danger of accepting meekly the most successful propaganda yet known.

PETTICOAT

Avoid falling in love this year

"One thing you must avoid this year is falling in love." --

(The scene is the lower campus. The trees are green and the birds and squirrels are really chugging away as hard as they can. The air is pregnant with excitement. And everything. There are billboards on the trees reading "Keep off the Grass".

Enter from stage left a beautiful young girl, Who is dressed beautifully. In sensible tweeds, which try as they may, fail to hid the lithe young. And everything. She carries, no, bears, she bears a copy of the Student Handbook, a copy of the Daily, eighteen reading lists, fourteen exercise books, four sharpened pencils, an eraser, a 700-page American textbook entitled "Canada's Economy", six sheets of Your Student Desk Blotter with the compliments of Your Life Subscription to Life. Oh Time. And eighteen fresh paperbacks. She is in high heels. She is in her First Year. Sings: "Oh, joy to little me -- hee I'm in the Arts faculty -- hee (la, la).

I'm going to get a degree -- hee And the counsellor at Crumblebum high said I would command a terrific salary -- hee And have a split -- level on -- opps!"

(A young man enters, sunlight striking off his manly. And everything. He is dressed in quiet grey flannels and back-to-school quiet grey blazer. And this really slim tie. He is bearing everything she is bearing, with the addition of the New Yorker, Esquire, Playboy, from the McGill Daily

Time Magazine with Canadian Content, five Setsquares and the A to M volumes of the Golden Book of Knowledge. He has his hands in his pockets. Really non. Chaland. Okay, now then).

He: "I'm sorry, I appear to have interrupted your -- ha, ha -- song. (He is assured, his voice is soft but strong, light but tonal. Very tonal. And he has the winning ways).

She: "Oh noooo, indeeeeed. Not at all. At All. At All."

(She blushes. A flush of crimson pervades her features in a most fetching way. She crimsions, is startled, like a young fawn in its lair. Really).

He: "Look here, how about (She looks there. And looks away again quickly). -- having a coffee with me in the"

She: "Eeeek, eeeek, eek, eeeek!" (he slaps her face sharply -- one, two, three and one two, one two, up and down, up and down, up and stop. Down. She giggles hysterically and then begins to sob. Great sobs shake her young frame. She continues through her sobs).

"I'm sorry. I'm such a fool, sniff, sniff, sniff."

He: (thoughtfully) "Yes".

She: "Only -- you know what we've been told, don't you? At the meeting, I mean?"

He: (bitterly) "Yes". (She drops her Political Science text. They both stoop to pick it up and their heads crack together. Rendering Them Momentarily Dizzy. They both collapse to the grass, sit up, gaze at each other, and then suddenly roll over together in helpless laughted through the Verdant Undergrowth. Music swells up into wild strings of seamusic. Or seaweed music. Camera zooms to big closeup of The Three Bears).

He: "Why don't I take you away from all this?"

She: "Oh, yes please."

He: "When, when?"

She: "To-night, now, now."

He: "Where?"

She: "I dunno. Anywhere. Verdun"

He: "Oh God! Yes, yes yes." (Loud voice over the P.A. system in the trees, behind the foliage. Birds and squirrels rapidly dechug. All of Nature is stilled).

The Voice: "One thing you must avoid this year is falling in love." Click.

(She rises slowly, her body wracked with pain, her blonde tresses drooping wantonly, brokenly, hiding her face. Then she begins the long walk down the campus, out the gates, and carefully arranging her tweeds, lies down under a Montreal Transportation Commission Bus. He, in the meantime, throws back his head and drinks a stiff vial of poison from Time Magazine. Leaves flutter down and cover his sensible grey flannels. A mean trombone moans "Careless Love" and the titles come up.....).
